Contacts are shown grouped by their starting letter but in a random order. Everytime we click on contact, the order is changed.

SPIN THE WHEEL!

When we click on a contact, we get to spin the wheel to see only one information from the contact. We only get one spin, and after that, the alphabetical order get randomized again (so if you didn't get the information you needed, you need to find the contact again)

The diagram illustrates the form's structure and user flow. A red arrow points from the 'Etc:' label down to the bottom of the page, indicating a scroll action. A blue arrow points from the 'Y o m e' text up to the 'Add character' button in the second 'Name:' row, suggesting a focus or selection action.

You can only add character one by one, and if you do a mistake, you clear the whole entry.
